And in her school reading books Grace saw that all the families had a mother and a father, a boy and a girl, and a dog and a cat.

"Our family's not right," she told Nana. "We need a father and a brother and a dog."

"Well," said Nana, "I'm not sure how Paw-Paw would feel about a dog. And what about me? Are there any nanas in your schoolbooks?"

Grace shook her head.

"Do I have to go then?" asked Nana.

"Of course not!" Grace said, hugging her.

Nana hugged her back.

"A family with you in it is a real family," she said.

"Families are what you make them."
